1. The University's Development

The academic year 2014/2015 was, after having completed successfully the process of reaccreditation, a year to adapt to the challenges of the next accreditation period. Thus, the university focused less on expanding its offer of programs and on founding new departments, but renewed the infrastructure for further growth. One big step was the adaptation of the university's structure of academic self-administration to the needs of a growing university. The University Assembly, a body where all members of faculty, together with representatives of the students and the administrative staff discussed on the relevant issues, proved to be too unwieldy due to its size to continue in this function. So the new University Senate replaced the Assembly, where a fixed number of elected representatives of faculty, administrative staff and students follow the same goals as the Assembly.

With these adaptations in the university's structure, MODUL University is ready to steer towards new challenges.

2. Students and Faculty

Minor changes in the curricula were implemented in 2014/2015 the undergraduate, the MSc and the MBA programs. They consisted only in small changes of course titles and adjustments in the weighting of the ECTS points. The current curricula can be found at <http://www.modul.ac.at/student-life/student-services/academic-services/rules-and-regulations/>.

The ratio of internal and external teachers is displayed in the next table:

	Undergraduate Programs	MSc Programs	MBA Programs	PhD Program	MU Total
h total	322 h	60 h	47 h	18 h	447 h
h internal	182 h	44 h	20 h	16 h	261 h
h external	140 h	17 h	28 h	2 h	186 h
Internal ratio	56,6 %	72,6 %	41,4 %	86,8 %	58,4 %

The difference between the Undergraduate programs' and MSc programs' high ratio and the ratio of the MBA programs lies in the nature of these programs, which rely heavily on the incorporation of teachers with a business and professional background. The overall figure shows that more than 50% of the courses are taught by internal faculty.

Documentation of the Selection and Promotion Procedures

During the report period, no search procedure for Full or Associate Professors was completed. Two appointment committees already formed last year continued their search.

The only promotion activity in connection with MODUL University Vienna was the habilitation of Dr. Sabine Sedlacek by the Vienna University of Economics and Business in summer 2015.

Measures to Promote Young Researchers and Human Resource Development

During the report period, MODUL University offered seven positions for young researchers and lecturers, giving them not only the possibility to focus on their doctoral thesis, but also including them in the scientific community, encouraging them to visit international congresses and to take part in research projects. Also, twelve young researchers were included in the scientific community at MODUL University as researchers on projects.

To help each faculty member to clarify its scientific and professional objectives and to structure its research, as well as to monitor the development and the progress of the faculty as a whole, every year each faculty member's Faculty Professional Development Objectives Plan is discussed with the respective dean.

The topics discussed in this interview are outlined in Annex I.

As special measurements to promote young researchers, regulations concerning premiums for publications in peer-reviewed journals should be mentioned. This way, MODUL University incites young researchers to publish their findings in renowned journals. The premium for a-rated journal amounts to € 1,000, the premium for b-rated journals to € 500.

In order to also promote the teaching quality, MODUL University Vienna started to award each semester a "Certificate of Excellence for Outstanding Teaching Performance" to lecturers who distinguished themselves in this field.

MODUL University Vienna also started in spring 2015 its "Working Papers Series" (<http://www.modul.ac.at/research/publications/working-paper-series/>), which helps young (and senior) researchers to get feedback to their papers before submitting them. This platform will also help to make MODUL University's research effort more visible.

3. Finances and Resources

In order to improve transparency, and in view towards quality management in the administration, the annual accounts have been checked by the company Fiducia Wirtschaftsprüfungs- und Steuerberatungs GmbH. The detailed figures can be found in the Annex II.

4. Research

4.1. MODUL University's Research Profile

MODUL University Vienna recognizes itself as a research oriented educational institution according to Humboldt's educational ideals. The university's profile should primarily consist of an outstanding reputation in research within its areas of specialization, and through that, it should make innovative and future-oriented learning possible.

MU Vienna wants to overcome the institutionalized separation between fundamental research, which is ostensibly dedicated to the object of its activities without regard to its usability, and applied research, which is carried out with a view on direct applicability in daily life. Like other leading national and international universities, MU Vienna has, in its initial stage of development, established a platform for industry research. It has done so in order to enable permeability between fundamental and applied research as well as to enable a precise, visible representation to the public.

Economic research at academic level will be successful primarily through a balanced mixture of basic and applied research endeavors and second through the transfer of research results into the teaching programs. Topics with the potential of profiling the university should emerge from research areas with a high potential to contribute to progress. This is particularly not everywhere the case in the area of business administration where only new and fashionable vocabulary is used (e.g. the buzzword of "destination management" in the specialization area of tourism and leisure). In addition to that, aspirations and competences have to match. In the long run, the private MODUL University Vienna is convinced to pursue the following five themes credibly (sequence has no ranking):

1. Travel Flow, Trend and Competitiveness Analyses

Very promising appears to carry forward the prevailing research initiatives in the field of regional tourism development. Urgent need for action still exists for conducting travel flow and competitiveness studies broken down by national, regional and urban structures. Questions like how the changes of infrastructure and tourism organizations in Eastern Europe impact on the competitiveness of Central and Eastern European destinations remain predominantly unanswered. President Karl Wöber contributes his more than 10 years' of experience in this field and offers – in cooperation with the largest national and European tourism organizations (Austrian National Tourism Organization, European Travel Commission, European Cities Tourism) – the most comprehensive database in European tourism statistics. In May 2009, this project received the "Ulysses Special Jury Prize" by the UNWTO in the category "Innovations for Tourism Companies". This database offers an ideal backbone for conducting research projects focusing on destination and competitiveness analyses and on the development and evaluation of innovative tools for marketing decision support.

The continuously updated secondary statistical information is complemented by occasionally conducted primary investigations (e.g. standardized guest surveys in selected cities, manager panel data on the development of services rendered by tourism organizations). Both data sources are exploited in parallel for running varied investigations.

Particular problems in regional analyses arise during data compilation and the application of methods due to incomplete and/or non-standardized data. Hence, the overall research aim in this area foresees the further extension of the currently largest international database of regional tourism statistics, the application of existing and the development of new tools of analysis to improve the evaluation of regional economic problems. The university is ambitious to achieve grants from UNWTO and the EU-COST initiative. A recent project set up a European price index to make city tourism destinations comparable. A proposal for investigating the feasibility of a European Virtual Tourism Observatory, which aims to create the capability to improve the coordination and harmonization of all tourism data and surveying techniques so as to enable public and private stakeholders to identify potential tourism development strategies, evaluate their performances, was recently submitted for funding by the European Commission (Call for tenders No 88/PP/ENT/CIP/11/B/N02S009, EC, DG Enterprise and Industry).

2. Development and Evaluation of Information Systems

Marketing Intelligence tools are used for developing IT-supported product innovations, management information systems and selected research fields of the web economy. In the area of tourism specific and innovative technological developments President Karl Wöber gained national and international expertise during the past decades. Examples are the domain-specific search engine (<http://www.austria.info>) contracted by the Austrian National Tourism Organization and the tourism portal developed on behalf of the European City Tourism Association that employs web usage mining and web content mining technologies (<http://www.visiteuropeancities.info>). This research area emphasizes the development and dissemination of non-trivial methods of analysis and optimization exploiting insights from management, marketing science, psychometrics, statistics and computational intelligence. Related topics for further development are: new media usage for generating and assessing product innovations in tourism and leisure as well as the application of shared-experience models in collaborative working environments (particularly for tourism management).

MODUL faculty already started research collaboration in the past in this field: e.g. the “European eContent Tourism Study” (Scharl, Wöber), commissioned by the Austrian Chamber of Commerce and presented at the European Forum Alpbach in 2001 during the Benchmarking Talks. As another successful example, the EU-project “DieToRecs” (Zins, Wöber; IST-2000-29474; <http://dietorecs.itc.it>) for the development of a case-based reasoning system for destination recommendation on the internet, can be mentioned here. The expertise accumulated in the course of these projects is exploited for the development of new grant proposals. Applications for acquiring further grant budgets are continuously discussed and elaborated to intensify the research activities in the area of personalized travel recommender systems for web-based and mobile applications. Research results in the field of web-mining applications generated by Dr. Astrid Dickinger and Mag. Clemens Költringer are presented at workshops, conferences and published in scientific journals. Prof. Andreas Zins, Dr. Irem Arsal and Mag. Valeria Croce started in 2008 contributing with the data supply for the generation of the annual European City Marketing “Benchmark Group City Tourism Report”. Since 2009, the editing and publishing of this report has been taken over by MODUL Research too. In the same year, a web-based interactive reporting tool has been developed for the same purpose and complement since then the conventional digital static print report.

Numerous projects in the field of media monitoring and knowledge management lack suitable analytical frameworks, focus on only one medium, or neglect the dual role of travelers and decision makers as producing and consuming units of content. These shortcomings open a very promising field for research to grasp and model e.g. the fundamental mechanisms of information diffusion in media of different degree of interactivity and their impact on the process of public opinion emergence. MODUL faculty members (Scharl, Sabou, Dickinger, Wöber) have been working on a series of successful FIT-IT Semantic System Projects (www.fit-it.at) since 2007, including IDIOM (www.idiom.at), RAVEN (www.modul.ac.at/nmt/raven) and DIVINE (www.weblyzard.com/divine). The technologies developed within these projects can be used to analyze the diffusion of tourism relevant information between websites, RSS feeds and social media (blogs, Wiki applications, discussion for a, etc.). Such an analysis can address the following questions of how tourists disseminate their travel experiences through social networks, and how decision makers in tourism exploit these processes. Under this category, a project proposal was developed under the headline “European Cities – Online Media Monitor” and submitted to the organization European Cities Marketing. Some of the major European tourism destinations already assured their interest and financial contribution.

MODUL University Vienna’s advanced information exploration and retrieval tools require accurate annotation services to enrich documents with geospatial, semantic and temporal tags. Such annotations describe complex relations, which are best understood in graphical form. For this purpose, webLyzard synchronizes geographic maps, tag clouds, keyword graphs as well as two- and three-dimensional information landscapes. These visualizations help users to understand the context of the gathered Web intelligence while navigating large repositories of Web documents – processing a user’s search query and showing the most relevant documents in their specific regional context, for example, or comparing the online coverage about an organization by different stakeholders groups.

The development of a geo-based tourism portal under the name CATER (Contextualized Access of Tourism-Related Electronic Resources) will apply the information exploration and retrieval tools mentioned above. CATER will evaluate the context-specific access to information spaces and experiment with novel forms of human-computer interfaces. Currently the Web mining platform is being extended into a real-time collaborative authoring environment as part of the “Climate Change Collaboratory” (www.ecoresearch.net/triple-c), a two-year research project with strong international support from Associate Partners such as the NOAA Climate Program Office (U.S. Department of Commerce), the NASA Ames Research Center (U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration), the London School of Economics and the U.S. Association of Science-Technology Centers.

4. Empirical Travel and Leisure Behavior Research

Research focuses on an innovative progress in the development of behavioral models. This means that more than an unreflected transfer of results of consumer behavior research into the domain of travel and leisure is envisaged. The complexity and peculiarity of the predominantly intangible tourism and leisure products challenge many aspects of prevailing models of buying behavior and urge for adaptation and re-orientation. However, the specific developments of the travel and leisure market and its contingencies act themselves as drivers for necessary adaptations in modeling the consumer behavior: important decision elements such as rhythm and horizon of buying decisions, information behavior and distribution channels changed dramatically within only a few years. Prof. Andreas Zins contributes with his extant experiences as a project manager of the Austrian National Guest Survey (GBÖ) and similar evaluation instruments and other grant or contract based projects related to all-inclusive cards, all-inclusive product offers, service evaluations for airport lounges and airlines, segmentation studies for the day-trip market, information behavior of travel consumers, assessment of alternative distribution channels for travel products, among others. Product innovations – their development and assessment – are further future oriented research areas in cooperation with IT-based and web-based tools.

5. Sustainable Tourism and Development

Based on the previous and current research areas of Prof. Dagmar Lund-Durlacher and Prof. Arno Scharl another research focus emerges in the area of sustainable tourism. Questions and problems related to quality assurance initiatives within destination management, the implementation of certification schemes as well as corporate social responsibility initiatives are among the future challenges to be addressed more systematically by research projects. Another platform for information exchange was established in 2003 by Prof. Arno Scharl: ECOresearch network is a research network for internet-based environmental information exchange with currently about 400 participating members (www.ecoresearch.net). His edited book in the Springer Advanced Information & Knowledge Processing Series about “Environmental Online Communication” substantiates the ample international interest into this multi-faceted research area.

6. Governance for Innovation and Sustainable Development

Innovation and sustainable development are both highly visible target areas on the political agenda, and demand the appropriate governance structures for their promotion. The central challenge of governance is developing the institutional capacity to design, promote, gain agreement for, implement, and monitor effective strategies. Ongoing research by Harvey Goldstein and Sabine Sedlacek concerning the role of institutions in the economic development process of many regions indicates the crucial role they play in the ability of regions to make transitions needed for sustainability in the midst of global competitive pressures.

7. The Role of Higher Education in Sustainable Economic Development

In the globalized, knowledge-based economy of the 21st century, organizations that produce and disseminate knowledge have a critical role to play in assisting cities, regions, and nations reach and sustain economic competitiveness. How do higher education institutions respond to this recognition, by expanding their activities beyond teaching and basic research to include economic, business, and technology development? Research conducted by Harvey Goldstein over the last ten years has examined the effectiveness of universities in the stimulation of regional economic development, the emergence of academic entrepreneurship and the problems and opportunities the 'entrepreneurial turn' of universities creates, and the analyses of policies and regulations that hinder how universities can become more effective as an engine of regional development. Sabine Sedlacek has been conducting research on how institutions of higher education have provided leadership as well as technical expertise in sustainable development practices, while Karin Glaser and Harvey Goldstein have an on-going research project on universities as actors in local and regional governance.

8. Tourism and Regional Development Policy

In the last few decades there has been a paradigm shift in how we view the relationships among tourism, development, and sustainability. Indeed there is a fragile interdependence between tourism, environmental quality, and regional economic well-being. How can tourism and regional development strategies be coordinated to achieve sustainable development?

9. The measurement of living conditions and quality of life

In close connection to the international developments regarding social structural indicators, MODUL University Vienna is engaged in fundamental research about the assessment of living conditions, quality of life and subjective well-being. Driven by the report of the Stiglitz-Sen-Fitoussi commission, OECD as well as EU are working on amendments to the system of social indicators, going far beyond merely economically oriented variables such as GDP or monthly income. However, severe measurement problems raise questions about the validity of many of the proposed indicators (such as subjective ratings of life satisfaction). Therefore, various kinds of measurement approaches are tested and compared on a large-scale basis, including particularly interviewing and survey approaches.

5.2. Collaboration with Professional Environment and Relevant Social Players

MODUL University Vienna highly values its collaboration with the professional environment and the relevant social players. This is stressed by the fact that an internship forms a compulsory part of the BBA programs. This not only helps the students to obtain valuable practical training and knowledge, but also tightens the bonds between MODUL University and the industry. Up to now, MODUL University maintains via MODUL Career, which supports BBA and BSc students in their internship, partnerships with 400 institutions and firms. Among these national and international partners are the Österreich Werbung (Austria’s national tourism agency), the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) and hotels and resorts from all over the world. MODUL Career also helps students in finding part-time jobs in their field of studies and maintains contacts with the alumni of MODUL University.

Of course, also the departments’ Industry Advisory Boards form part of the university’s strategy of collaboration.

Furthermore, close ties connect the university’s Department of Tourism and Hospitality Management with European Cities Marketing (ECM) and the European Travel Commission (ETC).

Since fall 2013, MODUL University Vienna is also chairing the Austria’s Conference of Private Universities (ÖPUK), which represents all Austrian private universities.

5.3. Overview MODUL Research GmbH

MODUL Research is a 100% subsidiary of MODUL University Vienna GmbH and serves as a hub to implement applied research projects with industrial partners and to communicate academic findings to the industry. Its manager is the Managing Director of MODUL University, Christian Hoffmann. For projects, external collaborators are hired and members of the faculty of MODUL University are borrowed.

In 2014/2015, the following amount of research monies have been acquired by MODUL Research:

	2014/2015
National sources	€ 0.00
International sources	€ 32,400.00
Total	€ 32,400.00

6. Quality Management

6.1. Organization and Instruments of Quality Management

Apart from the evaluations of the courses by the students (below.), MODUL University asks its students after the first year and before graduation to evaluate the university's services. The results are discussed with the respective departments and offices.

Also an "Employee Satisfaction Survey" has been conducted in 2014/2015. The results have been presented, discussed and have been taken into consideration by the University Board.

In the wake of adapting the university's structure, the "Equal Opportunity Employer Working Party" (EOWP) was created. This body, which is firmly established in the University's Constitution, is a contact point for cases of infringement of equal opportunities.

6.2. Evaluations

The results of the individual courses were made accessible to the lecturers; the respective deans received an overview of the results as well, enabling them to discuss salient outcomes with the lecturers. In order to provide an overview, the overall results of the last year are included in this report.

6.3. Collaboration of Student Representatives in Committees

In 2014/2015, due to a change in the national law, MODUL University's students, as all students at a private university in Austria, joined Österreichische HochschülerInnenschaft (ÖH), so the elections in May 2015 were held according to the respective law. The elected representatives nominated their peers for the University Senate and the other relevant bodies. Thus, they were connected to nearly all decision-making processes and helped in keeping the decisions' qualities high.
